GOSPEL REFLECTION 7th Sunday in Ordinary Time

Are you a Perfectionist?

Are you seeking the flawless life, the perfect looking home? Do you keep revising a piece of work, striving for it to be the best? Do you seek to be number one, always – second best will not do for you? There are probably times in our lives when each one of us has been driven to be perfect.

Our Gospel today calls us to be perfect, but not in the worldly sense – in the God-sense of perfection. And is this different you might ask? Just being the best at something is not what Jesus is speaking about. Today we hear the radical call of Jesus – being a nice person is not enough, saying we are following Jesus is not enough.

In this reading we are called to spend our lives serving Him and allowing ourselves to be formed by Him. We are called to be holy and called to be perfect. These are terms that can cause all kinds of scrupulosity and rigidity in some people, so we must make sure that we understand these words. Holiness is simply living for God in every aspect of our lives. Perfection is not in doing everything perfectly, but in loving others in God as we love God Himself. We shall never be without our imperfections at the level of doing, but in the level of loving, the more we let God's love go through us to others, the closer we are to the God-sense of perfection and holiness.

So today let us become radical in our living and gentle in our loving always ready to forgive because God's love demands it.
